AppCrashView is a software application which helps users view information pertaining to all crashes transpired on your system. This is possible by extracting information from all WER files created by a component of your operating system, Windows Error Reporting. This tool is portable, does not require installation or additional DLLs. You can copy the program files to any location on the hard drive, and run it by double-clicking the executable. If you place these files on a USB flash disk, you can use AppCrashView on any computer you have access to. Aside from that, you should know the Windows registry is going to remain unchanged and there will be no leftovers upon the app's removal. The interface is accessible to both experienced users and beginners, while the main window contains two panes. One shows the contents of a selected crash file, and the other displays a list of all crashes found in the system, along with information such as process file, event name and time, exception code, fault module name, report file size and path. It is possible to select multiple crashes and copy them to the Clipboard or save them to the hard disk in TXT, CSV, HTML and XML formats. You can also use a search function, and filter results by matching case or only whole words. There are not Help contents provided, yet this cannot be seen as a drawback, as they are not actually necessary, seeing how easy it is to use. CPU and memory usage keep a low level, and therefore this utility will not affect the way your computer runs. Taking all of this into consideration, it becomes apparent that AppCrashView is an efficient piece of software which can provide you with useful information regarding particular crashes. KeyMACRO is an application that enables you to define keyboard macro keys. You can assign a macro to different keys or combinations, and use it later by pressing the key you assigned. It is possible to create a macro for all keys, a key for the left part of the keyboard, a key for the middle part, and so on. Besides that, the program can be used as a hotkey for Windows. It is possible to assign a hotkey to a key, which means it will fire whenever you press the key assigned. When you assign the hotkey to, say, the Delete key, you can later use the hotkey to delete a word in Word, or cut something from the document in Notepad. There are a few other features that make KeyMACRO stand out from the crowd. You can set hotkeys for common tasks, such as cutting from one document to another, or copying, then you can use the hotkeys to operate these tasks. You can also customize the appearance of the interface, which means you can change how many rows of keys it shows. This is not a trivial feature, but even if it is less important than the other ones, I can say that the customization options of the interface are quite extensive. KEYMACRO is a free, light application, and will run on all versions of Windows since Windows Vista and above. However, it is not available in the Windows 10 version. The application is easy to use, and since the user interface is fully customizable, you can make it look the way you like it. KEYMACRO can be downloaded from the developer's official site, and will only be used if you are the registered owner of the program. The installation is completely free, you don't have to pay anything to use it. The setup does not harm your computer in any way, and therefore this software is completely safe to use. If you don't want to use the default interface, you can customize it the way you see fit. Besides that, you can use it for free, and you won't even have to give a single dime. I have not encountered any serious errors, yet it is recommended to uninstall the application and run a complete scan with the Registry Mechanic (or other similar tool). A dirty truth about registry cleaners: It is possible that they make things worse. That is, you will not be able to use the program effectively and its capabilities will be lost. But what has just really begun to sink in is the impact of the new law on their pocketbooks. "This is something we have been hearing about for a long time. But I think it has only really hit home now," said Steve Wetherill, of the Insurance Exchange Council. Under the state's new health care exchange, known as Covered California, more than 800,000 Californians will get better insurance in 2014. That's the good news. The bad news: The cost will be passed along to consumers. "We expect the increase to be at least 9 percent in 2014," said Peter Lee, a spokesman for the Covered California. "So this is a 5 percent increase for most Californians." If you live in an area with lots of uninsured residents, you may see your premium go up by even more than 9 percent. "Right now, someone without health insurance has an annual health insurance premium of $1,061. At the same time, someone who buys coverage through Covered California through an exchange will pay $1,277," Lee said. The new law includes a series of taxes. The largest is a 10 percent surcharge for people who don't get health insurance. "If you don't have coverage at all, we will be imposing that surcharge on you for 2014," Lee said. "If you have coverage and you make more than 400 percent of the federal poverty level, then we will be imposing that surcharge on you." How much will the surcharge be? About $280, Lee said. And because of the surcharge, insurance companies will be required to spend more on medical care. "Our members are already paying for the cost of care as a result of the Affordable Care Act," Lee said. "If the Affordable Care Act is passed, they will pay even more for the cost of care."

What's New in the AppCrashView?

This tool is very effective at extracting information on the executable and DLL file(s) that resulted in the system crash. It was built using the.NET Framework (4.0 or higher) and therefore does not require any additional DLLs. It performs a systematic search of the OS Event Logs by filtering the event types that occurred on the system. This leads to a higher chance of extracting useful information on the crashed program. For the sake of simplicity, the information that is extracted is presented in two main windows: The first window shows the information extracted from the executable file. This includes the file name, source and line numbers and a list of all assembly-level debug information found. The second window contains a list of all the crashes that have been detected on the system. By selecting a specific item from the list, you can view the list of information pertaining to that crash, such as time, exception code, process file, event name, user, user process and so on. The installation files can be found in the AppCrashView\Scripts folder. The executable file is labeled AppCrashView.exe and all other files are labeled AppCrashView_*.dll.
