Although it may seem like a daunting task at first, in fact it's much easier than it looks! In this book, I show you how to make your own type characters and how to create a few simple examples of type types. By the end of this book, you'll understand the basics of Photoshop typography and have mastered how to create your own custom characters. Take the time to learn about printing, or even the theory behind how type looks in print, before you begin working with Photoshop. For example, you will want to learn about special fonts that fit in better with your chosen color scheme. This is a good way to achieve a successful, harmonious combination. Finally, you'll learn the basics of how to center and align text on your pages. When you're done learning, you'll have a good grasp on what you need to know to create type in Photoshop. ## TYPOGRAPHY IS ALL ABOUT THE ILLUSTRATOR'S ATTENTION TO DETAIL AND SPLASHES OF COLOR Type is what is printed on the pages of a book. And the typeface—the type character, as well as the style of type (bold, italic, or other variations)—is a question of emphasis, mainly through the two-dimensional appearance. Illustrator's amazing multi-stroke lettering process enables you to quickly and easily create character fonts and a wide variety of type design. Figure 1-6 shows the type used in the paperback cover shown here. Figure 1-6: Illustrator's multiline lettering makes it simple to create multiple lines of text and work with multiple letters and characters. Illustrator can create up to three custom character sets, numbered 0 through 2. (In this book, you'll work with both the Calligraphic font and the

Alejandro Mudd, a redshirt freshman offensive lineman for the University of Miami Hurricanes, completed a social justice grant titled "No More: Rethink Racism" for the University of Miami. In the video above, Alejandro discusses his campaign. Mudd joined the University of Miami football team as a center for the 2015 season. Last year, Mudd was a member of the football team, but did not play. He changed his commitment to the University of Miami when the football program's head coach, Mark Richt, was fired. The video has been viewed 3,700 times in the last two days. In the video, Mudd says the following: "I wanted to make this video to start a conversation about a problem that society has to face. No More: Rethink Racism. I'm a strong black man. I was raised by strong black parents. I love my black family. I was in a majority of black neighborhoods in high school. I knew how to be in those environments. I've never had a racist comment directed at me. So for me to do this video and have an audience that was racially mixed is something that could make a difference. It could make a difference in the Miami community and in the black community. And I want to help it do that." Mudd explains,

"It's definitely something that doesn't happen in the Black and White community. You don't usually have people that come together for the black and the white community. But I'm hoping that we can provide that opportunity." Mudd talks about the motivation for the "No More" project. He says the project is important to him because of the words his father used to tell him: "My dad told me, 'You know what you have to be willing to do in life is to be people in charge. Because you have to go in and sometimes there will be things in your life that seem ridiculous to you but if you take that step and you step in and you make the decision, you can make a difference for somebody.'" "And when I heard my dad speak those words, I just said I want to be a leader. He instilled that in me. And this is a platform, this is an opportunity, to be a leader and to change the world for those young men." What do you think? What are your thoughts on Alejandro Mudd's social justice campaign video? This entry was
