High-efficiency continuous CO₂-generating reaction of NH₃ with CO₂ for the synthesis of ammonia bicarbonate at 800 degrees C. The micro-reactor technology is essential for investigating the mechanism of organic reactions, and non-linear autothermal catalytic reactors (NACR) have been developed for the high-temperature reactions. The NACR-CO₂ technology for the organic synthesis at elevated temperatures has been reported, but the CO₂ generation for this technology has not been demonstrated yet. In this paper, the NACR-CO₂ technology was developed for the synthesis of ammonia bicarbonate. The CO₂-generating autothermal reforming reactions of NH₃ with CO₂ were conducted in a micro-reactor using a Cu-based Al₂O₃-TiC solid oxide catalyst, and the synthetic reaction was explored at 800 degrees C. By using a single-phase Cu-Al₂O₃-TiC catalyst at 800 degrees C, NH₃ with CO₂ could be converted into ammonia bicarbonate without coke deposition. Moreover, the production of high-purity and high-concentration ammonia bicarbonate, 10.1 mol %, was achieved without temperature rise. These results suggest that the autothermal reforming of NH₃ with CO₂ is a powerful reaction system for the synthesis of ammonia bicarbonate.
