Lowering Therapy for the Prevention of Progression of Coronary Atherosclerosis in a Korean Population: Initial Results. Although statin therapy is considered to be effective for the prevention of progression of coronary artery disease (CAD), the optimal treatment dose and duration of treatment are uncertain. Moreover, 2 major concerns with long-term statin therapy are the safety and tolerance of statins. However, recent statin studies with 10-year outcomes have shown the beneficial effect of statin therapy even after the median follow-up of 5 years, and several recent studies have shown the beneficial effects of statin in progression of CAD. To assess the additive lipid-lowering effects of atorvastatin and pravastatin in progression of CAD and clinical events, we conducted a retrospective, observational, single-center study at the Yonsei Cardiovascular Study Group. We enrolled 57 CAD patients who were treated for primary and secondary prevention. Atorvastatin 10-40 mg or pravastatin 10-40 mg were administered. The final analysis was performed in 42 patients with three-vessel CAD and prior statin therapy. Of the 42 patients, 24 were treated with atorvastatin and 18 with pravastatin. The baseline characteristics were similar between the two groups. After a mean follow-up of 6.6 years, the primary end point (cardiac death, myocardial infarction, and repeated revascularization) occurred in only one patient. The final event-free survival rate was 91.7% and 100% in patients treated with atorvastatin and pravastatin, respectively. This study demonstrates the preventive effect of continuous lipid-lowering therapy in progression of CAD as well as the safety and tolerability of statin therapy in routine clinical practice.

my friend's Xubuntu 15.04 installation's login screen has a maximum brightness level of 30%, while my Ubuntu 15.04 installation's maximum brightness level is at 60% minimum. Does anyone know how to change that? I can't find anything in the GUI and I'm not sure if the command line to change that would work. Hello, I have a Asus G75VG-a1 laptop with Intel Graphics 620. After a fresh installation of Xubuntu 15.04 when I open the laptop it starts with low brightness and freezes shortly after. It's hard to read anything and programs are barely visible on the screen. The only way to fix it is to remove `/home//xsession-errors`. The problem is that after I reboot the machine for the very first time, there are a whole lot of errors in `/home//xsession-errors` file after boot, however they aren't the same errors from boot of my previous computer. In the beginning of the boot all looks normal, but starting at 3.5 hours of it, there is the following error message repeated over and over until the laptop is shut off: [2] 0xb04224d5 in GST_CORE_ (sig=9) [9] 0xb0422b97 in gst_element_bin_fill (buf=, stride=1420, offset=0, nelem=0) at pipe-
