Star Fields is a single-screen game. A large scrolling star field scrolls from left to right, with a small space for movement. You control a ship moving left to right across the field. Every few seconds a ring flashes on the field and the object of the game is to collect the rings by pressing the left mouse button as they appear. Each time you touch a ring you gain a star. The more rings you have the more stars you gain. The game is easy to play, but difficult to master. Stars and Ring Food and Rings count towards your total for that level. There is a selection of power ups to help you gain stars, including a powerful bomb which clears all rings on screen at once. The game has lots of levels, each with their own music, layout, designs and challenges. Full sound on Windows, Mac and Linux! Enjoy the original electronic/progressive/synth/retrowave soundtrack for the game or import your own mp3s to hear them while you play!

A: I don't think that is a quiz. I think it is called a jumble. From Wikipedia: Jumble is a word game in which players must decipher the jumbled letters. It has both a competitive and casual play. The game starts with a cue, usually the word jumble, which has letters scrambled together randomly. The player must name the single word. In fact, at Wikipedia you can see a game that is called Jumble.

Warface is an action MMO in which players team up in squads and battle enemies in co-op and PvP. The best part is that this game is playable on PC, PS3, Xbox 360. Game features include massive, player-versus-player combat, a massive character development system, fast-paced action, intense teamwork, and a high skill cap. The gameplay is simple, but the skills, tactics, and team work can be overwhelming. At the beginning of the game you are given the choice of a character: either a tank, an assault, or a support. The character you create, as well as the special skills you learn, are based off of your choices. Each class has its own unique weapons, and the environment changes as you progress through the story. You get to fight for survival, and the game’s progression system is very rewarding. The storyline is centered around a futuristic war between the factions known as “Verum” and “Iniquum”. These factions are the result of the capture and abuse of the “Hakon” (the non-living chemicals known as DNA) and the “Adam” (the ultimate life force). Warface is a cyberpunk MMO game set in a dystopian high-tech world, where mutants have overrun the earth, as well as nuclear plagues and nanotech-based diseases. The common soldier could not fight against these monsters, but the Verum and Iniquum have prepared their own agents to fight for survival. While the main story will be the same in every country, the characters that are created from every class will be different. This provides a different perspective to the stories and gameplay throughout the game. It is as if a person were to get into a time machine and you wake up in a different time period. Each country or faction is broken down by zone, level, and class. Your progression through the game is based on the class and gameplay. Your overall experience during the game will change greatly based on the character you choose to play. Each character class requires a different approach and style of play. Every class has its own unique weapons and combos, as well as special skills. Due to the unique gameplay of the games, player classes may not seem familiar at first. The game is intended to allow players to enjoy themselves through exploration and experimentation. The characters in the game are a mixture between anime and videogames. Every class looks distinct

The soundtrack to 'HEAVEN WILL BE MINE' finds you descending into the immense tidal gravity well of deep space. All encompassing heartbreak and war in the form of heart-rending synthesizer pads and tear-stained electronic drum programming. Total sub bass atrophy in the heart of a long-gone lover. The unique offer to suffer prolonged exposure to the head-down hypnotic punishment of a dying galaxy. Like being vaporized in a solid beam of light. Like weeping out a blastwave.

White Stag

Above is a picture of the model I am reviewing below. First lets take a look at what we have, An almost sked all painted model a young boy named Leo happened to step on the scales to check if it was time for his next meal. He takes a closer look and starts to make a mental note of everything he sees on the scales himself. This young man is from the new White Stag line. The line focuses on realistic models and this boy even has a head on the stands. He is finely detailed and has a fine set of detail on his head. There are a few glazed bricks that are glued to the white stager young man. If you look on each side of his eyes the glazed bricks actually connect to a quik connect piece and then they are held in place by the glue then applied over each set of his eyes. His eyes really pop out and give the illusion that the white stag is glaring at you. On the sides of his head there are small padded pieces that actually hold up his ears. This bring to question his almost wolf like stare. Here are the instructions included with the model. This young man is absolutely fantastic and it will become your new favorite subject and toy.
