

We are thrilled to be able to reveal more details about this groundbreaking gaming innovation and the collective work of the talented FIFA community team. This video gives a glimpse of how the HyperMotion Technology team collects the data that makes its way into the game. Please click here to see a recent interview with Ludwig Knolle, who is responsible for the HyperMotion Technology project at EA SPORTS™ FIFA. The teams at EA SPORTS™ FIFA have been working on the technology, and the EA SPORTS™ FIFA community is already coming up with incredible innovations. An example of this is a recently-announced innovation to support goalkeepers, which will work on the PS4™ system. Keeping a defensive eye on the ball can be very tricky and, as a result, aim assists that are successful for one goal keeper can be very lucky and not produce an assist to his teammate. As Goalkeepers, you will have the ability to predict aerial shots, prevent shots on goal and balance the amount of predicted and lucky assists your goalkeeper is able to receive. This will be announced in a blog post in the near future. The innovation is developed by the team at EA SPORTS™ FIFA and will be available on Xbox One and PlayStation 4. Speaking of the FIFA community, we recently held the FIFA Community Event Awards in Montreal and were proud to give out the Frostbite Soccer Innovation Award to Goal! A mobile game that combines the sport of football, soccer and real-life player motion capture. The award was in recognition of the incredible hard work that Goal! team has been putting in over the last few years. Goal! is an independent, self-funded team that has been working tirelessly to deliver an authentic football experience to mobile gamers worldwide. In the months to come you will see more about FIFA Community driven innovation that will be available to the FIFA community. You can see that FIFA 22 includes the FIFA Ultimate Team™ mode, which is the largest iteration of the game's unique FUT gameplay yet and sees players competing in 64-team single-elimination FUT tournaments. FIFA 22 will be available for PlayStation 4, Xbox One and PC on 17 September in North America and 15 September in Europe. Players will be able to pre-order FIFA 22 at participating retailers and for those who pre-order there will also be an exclusive DLC pack, the FIFA 22 FIFA Ultimate Team Legend Pack available on 20 September. The playable demo of FIFA 22 is now available on Xbox One, PlayStation 4 and PC.
