Located north west of Charing Cross, Fitzrovia has traditionally been known as the location of the Australian High Commission and many of the top restaurants in the borough. The area is the location of many of London's "identikit" East End Shops, and is popular with international expatriates. History Archaeological excavations carried out in 1976 by the Museum of London discovered the remains of the Roman walls of Flavia Caesarea, a garrison town built by the Roman emperor Septimius Severus as part of his Wall of the Britons. The wall and fort were constructed to prevent attack by the Welsh tribes of the south-western portion of Britain. The site is now occupied by Finsbury Square. The nearby site of the Roman Temple of Mithras can be found west of the district. Excavations carried out in 1977 by the Museum of London showed that the area had been occupied from the Roman times until the seventeenth century and revealed the existence of a Roman watermill. The site was part of the ancient Diocletian's Palace, built by the Emperor Diocletian, the first Emperor of the Tetrarchy. The Palace was demolished in the seventh century when its area was occupied by the Saxon burial ground for St. Botolph's Priory. It was at the rear of the Priory Churchyard that a number of streets sprang up to accommodate the workmen

This section provides information about the deployment of Windows CE 5 on mobile phones. window ce 5.0 download: Android Apps - Download to SD card Solution: When you download Windows 8.1, Windows 8, 7, 7.1, 7, Vista or XP on your PC, it will automatically add to system registry files a folder called LOCALAPPDATA which contains the Windows images and applications stored on your PC. If you use Mac on your PC, you are welcome to create a new folder under LOCALAPPDATA and name the folder "Windows". A newer version of Windows may replace the newer version of Windows installed on your PC with newer version of Windows. to point to the newly created Windows folder in LOCALAPPDATA, you have to change the registry value If you do not change the Windows folder name, you have to change the registry value before the newer version of Windows replaces the older version of Windows. If you do not change the Windows folder name, you have to change the registry value before the newer version of Windows replaces the older version of Windows. (This is not at all like Windows XP, where the OS will not upgrade the versions in their folders. If you have older versions of Windows installed on your PC, you can use any or all of the following to test if you PC is using the Windows 7 folder instead of the Windows 8 folder: 1) Locate the new folder for Windows 7 (M:) and open it. Then check whether the Windows 7 files are saved at the root level of the new folder or within
