Kaepernick will be honored by the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art (SFMOMA) in a special exhibition that opens next month. The “Colin Kaepernick: How We Look Now” exhibition, which includes over two dozen of the quarterback’s works, is slated to open to the public on May 10. It will be on view for three months, ending in July. It is the first major public exhibition of Kaepernick’s work. Kaepernick recently launched a #TimesUp art project, painting eight canvases in support of Time’s Up movement for equal pay in the workplace. SFMOMA said in a statement released on its website that the exhibit will consist of “many paintings in a variety of media, including collage, color block, and drawing,” and “will use fashion, media, and body politics as a lens through which to interpret the themes of color, race, and identity in the works.” The exhibition’s curatorial team consisted of Collins Reynolds, SFMOMA’s director of media and performing arts; Ada Gallego de la Peña, the museum’s current artist-in-residence; and Valeria Ucha, a professor in the department of design at Yale.

to 2016 but has drawn the ire of NFL players and fans since the beginning of the 2017 season, as he began kneeling during the national anthem in protest of racial inequality and police brutality. In the ensuing months, Kaepernick opted out of his contract with the Niners and became a free agent. Kaepernick also created a documentary “You Can’t Make This Sh*t Up,” which aired on HBO in March. SFMOMA said it invited Kaepernick’s family to the exhibition, as he is raising three children with his fiancée, Nessa Diab
