Can a magic user in Pathfinder play a magic item? (e.g. spelljammer boots, etc.) A: Yes Keep in mind that one of the goals of Pathfinder is to be a more flexible experience, and that includes allowing you to have different classes play a similar role. The basic theme behind this philosophy is to give characters a variety of options when playing them: not all characters are warriors, not all characters are clerics, not all characters are fighters, etc. That said, what classes do these sorts of magic item actually work for? An artifact being worn? One of the best things about magic items in Pathfinder is that they require a lot of planning and preparation to make them happen, which is why they are so rare, and why you likely only see magic weapons and armor in published games (or in supplemental material like Essentials). If you're really worried about that - if you're worried about how an artifact might not work in the real world, then why invest in it? That said, while it's true that sometimes it's appropriate to roll a d20 for a magic item that's specifically meant to be used in a specific way (like, say, a grappling hook, or a grappling gun), it's ultimately much, much, much easier to just buy one. And since it's easier to buy one than to make one, it's probably easier to just buy one. Magic item from another class? For this one, it depends on the rest of the e79caf774b
