I Am is a story-driven first-person action game inspired by old school run and gun games from the 90s. We have been working on the game for over 5 years, and we are proud to be able to finally launch it on Steam and the Humble Store. We hope you enjoy it. Gameplay Video Website A: I was the tech lead for this game at Thekla Studios As a veteran of the game industry for 12 years, I've seen it all - but in my 17 years working in the games industry this is the one game project that has been the biggest challenge for me. Not only in terms of creativity and technical difficulty, but also in terms of fitting it into a business model. The epic premise: The game I Am - a story of awakenings was always intended to be a story-driven first person action game. For the last 5 years we have been working on polishing and refining the game, along with recruiting other artists and writers to tell the story of our main character. Like many other first person action games, the main thing that we tried to do with the game was to create an immersive experience. This meant not only creating a believable experience, but also to involve the player to feel involved and feel part of the character's journey. But then the challenge struck. The story had to be included in the game engine. The best way to do this was to create two chapters, one for each player in the story, that played out in different ways. To give the player insight into the story we also created an option to write their own story instead of playing the one we created. This will be the first game I have worked on where the player is not just a character, but a major character themselves. They have the ability to make decisions that will affect the story, and more importantly, affect their own character. The goal of the game The ultimate goal of the game is to create an experience that allows the player to feel like they are the main character in their own story. We want the player to feel like they have become the hero of their own story. Q: Setting a gpg-agent on macOS Mojave using AppleScript's run I would like to be able to use the gpg-agent on macOS 10.14.4 with AppleScript on Mojave using the run command. The UI doesn't show the gpg-agent itself, and

World of PIPELINE RTX was carefully designed and implemented in the Unity engine, without requiring additional components such as a game engine, which means a huge savings of time and resources. Cheat style:

- This plugin adds a new feature to virtually all aircraft to apply this new feature called "Capsul mode". The capsul mode changes colors of the object based on its current state. So if the aircraft is trimmed or configured for ILS then the color will be dark green and if it is a sunset flight then will be dark blue. For each object, when enabled via object Selection > Capsul Mode, you can also have a separate sliders controlling the colors for ILS/GLS/NGLS and sunset/morning flight colors. You can configure these to be on/off per object via object's Room Map or Object Configuration (you can add your own object on the map using room map designer). Also, you can adjust the range and name color for the slider using below options in sliders panel.

- The "Slider Mix" field will mix up the amount of colors visible per objects. If you have 4 objects with capsul on and another 4 with capsul off, only the ones with capsul are visible, the red & green slider will represent the capsul behavior.
- You can adjust the Range of object before setting capsul color for that via the sliders panel. Adjust range to 1 or 0 to render capsul color on the whole object or all of it.
- ShadeX can also be used to either apply capul colors on / off selected objects or can be used to check for capsul on all objects i.e. it will mix up the colors for capsul on or capsul off.
