Interactive Inc., provider of the OVI platform, announces the release of "The Gift of Astonish", a jaw dropping low-budget stop-motion sci-fi short from award-winning filmmaker Paul "D-Man" Abrams and co-director Will Heveningham. The story of the great Beyond storytellers closed in 2018. The Gift Of Astonish is a dystopian fantasy about finding the ultimate escape in space. The key is to live in a dream world. Using the AVI platform, they search the cosmos for the ultimate escape pods in styles that inspire extravagant visions. The Beyond astronauts survive a silent, cruel, destructive world. They have recovered and completed everything that life was built on earth for. In what they stand for in this utopian world, they haven't met a soul. Each has a dream. The notion of quitting life on earth is nothing new. Some people have become astronauts. Escape artist Joe Katt and his crew became famous for defying death after a plane crash. Jammy, survived the famous 'fish tank'. This planet has always had outer space born adventurers trying to escape their way of life. When asked about what the title means, D-Man said, "If you're looking to make some serious money off of your project your going to have to consult with an astrological examiner. "Among the astrological elements to look at is the Sabian, a trend following character. They are very independent. They see things happen first and are rarely in accordance with popular culture. "The Sabian is 5th of a 9 degree sign. Boring but reliable." While the astrological image and wording are fitting of the movie title; the name of the movie is a reference to one of Tony Clifton's many known quotes, "Gravity is the final origin of space." "This is only a short, but we wanted to capture the dreamy mood of space with dramatic settings and visuals," said Heveningham. "We are always asking ourselves about how this film project came about. We just talk about ideas and lets see how one thing follows the other. That is how this movie was born." D-Man added, "Astronaut Barefoot Revisited "was written in 1999, mostly written by D-Man. The concept was born
