What's new in Friday The 13th: Killer Puzzle - Retro Jason:

Revenge Friday the 13th: Killer Puzzle - Retro Jason Revenge is a 2011 part of the game series Friday the 13th: The Game. It is the sequel to Dead by Daylight: Jason X. It is developed by Gamelion and published by New Generation Interactive of Canada. Gameplay Retro Jason Revenge is played in a first person perspective with a game mechanic that is similar to the game Uncharted: Drake's Fortune (2007). The game is a team-based game where two to four players, the killers, must, as the name suggest, puzzle their way through the corpses of their victims. In a similar fashion to the previous Jason game, the killer is limited to actions that can be used in the game, similar to a choose your own adventure book. Story Retro Jason Revenge takes place after the events of Dead by Daylight: Jason X. Jason X is a Jason Twitch game, in which many players went into Jason's worlds because of Derek Mears. The other players went in different worlds, and they ended up inside Jason's corpse, and they were trapped there until they go outside. When Jason X ended, many players that the killer in the game — JD (Jason's killer), Elijah Goodwin, David Arda, and Ted Manheim — were dead. JD's side of the trailer ended up in the survivor clubhouse, while Elijah's and Ted's went to a prison, and David survived by going into a stone corridor. As told to the players in Dead by Daylight: Jason X, David and Elijah have gone into a different timeline that is in exactly the same place where JD has been killed. Some time has passed before the events of Retro Jason Revenge, and the survivors of Jason X are now trying to move on. JD's group has this involved in a project to build a dungeon crawl underneath a funeral home. They collect radioactive material from the corpses of Jason's victims, and use it to power their dungeons of the underworld. Ted Manheim has contracted viral infection from a girl named Olivia. As he made a documentary about it, he and his cameraman were killed by Ted the Clown. David however survived, by falling into a stone corridor. He became the first survivor in the world to have cancer. In an unknown place, JD was haunted by the ghost of Elliot Kelly. Elliot's haunted JD sees in his dreams that Jenna Branson, Jenna Grady, and Kristen Lagersten (Elliot's supposed victims) are conspiring. JD went into a cave
