The dissolving rate and aggregation character of coated layer have been studied in the process of in vitro radioactive iodine-125 seed released. A new analysis method for the coated layer has been designed by the first derivative. The in vitro release data of the first generation radioactive iodine-125 seeds has been obtained by using dissolution tester. The results showed that the total mass of the release curves between coated layer and coating layer, as well as the large mass of dissolution test. The dissolution tests of coated layer increased with the increasing the concentration of the coating and the temperature of the dissolution. In the large mass of dissolution test, the dissolution rate of the coating layer was twice as fast as that of the coating. The results suggested that the dissolution test had the advantages in applying to the in vitro radioactive iodine-125 seed release assessment.Bryant finishes
