The current version of Photoshop is 9.0 and is available as a free download from the Adobe web site. Working in Pixel Space Photoshop includes several tools for working with pixel space. You can work with the pixels, or you can work in a floating-point space. The floating-point space is useful for setting the color for a particular point on the screen. After you set the color, you can then create an art element or object that can be moved around on the screen and can then be scaled up to any size. As you create your art, you're able to take advantage of pixels, working with eight pixels for every one that you create. Pixel Space To create an object in pixel space, follow these steps: 1. Choose Select⇒Object⇒Modify⇒Create from the menu bar. Alternatively, click the Modify button at the bottom of the workspace. You can also press the E key. 2. On the Create New dialog box, use the Type drop-down menu to choose the type of object you want to create. You can also type any text into the New Object dialog box. I illustrate some of the choices in Figure 6-4. The Figure 6-4 image also shows the dialog box for working with an object's pixels; this dialog box shows only a few options. Photoshop includes several prebuilt objects, such as lines, paths, and text. You can use any of these prebuilt objects and customize them as needed. Selecting text that you've used as a template, however, is much easier than creating objects using a text object template. 3. Click OK to create the object, and then click anywhere in the image to return to the workspace. The object is now created at the current pixel location in the image. A white rectangle (shown in the top part of the Figure 6-4 image) represents the object on the image at the center of the workspace. As you start dragging the mouse, you see the object move. The last step shown in the Figure 6-4 image is useful for using an existing object as a template. This is an important lesson because you can save your work and later reuse it again if necessary. The finished image appears in Figure 6-5. The finished image appears in Figure 6-5. Photoshop includes a number of tools for working with pixels

Shopbop.com, the fashion e-tailer, announced today that it has acquired fashion retail brand-label Meimai, a fine-lifestyle brand that caters to the urban urban hipster. Meimai will continue to operate as an independent brand and will have its own distinct website and retail stores. The announcement comes only a few weeks after the same media company known for its digital media platform Shopbop announced the sale of 50 percent of its fashion-luxe e-tailer fashionboutique.com and its subsidiary retail sites, Blowfish, for $30.6 million to J. Crew owner Ascena Retail. This is the latest in a long line of digital fashion brands that have sold to companies like Meimai; luxury clothing retailer Liberty of London also sold to Shopbop earlier this year. As Shopbop tries to compete more in-store with luxury brands like Gucci, the acquisition of Meimai adds to that evolution. In addition to the Meimai signature store in Los Angeles, the brand also has locations in Tokyo, Shanghai and London. Meimai's customers include Angelina Jolie and Khloe Kardashian, according to the announcement. "We're thrilled to have Meimai join the Shopbop family," said Scott Shellen, co-founder and CEO of Shopbop. "The company's strong design reputation and powerful online presence make it a perfect complement for our existing international offering." Meimai's director Tony Siju notes that Shopbop's e-commerce and retail strategy is much in line with his own in that it reaches an international clientele on its sites across the world. Meimai, he said, was founded to design for a global audience. "We share Shopbop's values and vision, and are extremely excited to work with them," Siju said. "We're thrilled with the Shopbop brand and I know we will do great things together." The site will continue to host the independent Meimai label. A representative for Shopbop provided this statement: "Shoptique.com has been transformed to focus solely on serving the global e-commerce market. The name of the company and the brands that we sell have changed from Shoptique.com to Shopb
