Q: Toolbar is not being removed from a UITabBarController I am trying to implement a toolbar in a View that is contained inside a UITabBarController. The TabbarController is initially set to the first tab. I added the toolbar in my storyboard, set a custom class for it and added the following code to my view controller (which is a subclass of UITabBarController):

-(void)viewDidLoad { [super viewDidLoad]; if (self.toolbar.customView) return; [self.toolbar.customView removeFromSuperview]; [self.view addSubview:self.toolbar]; }

And while the toolbar is added to the view, when I select one of the tabs, the toolbar does not disappear (I think it's hiding on purpose). Do you know why this is happening?

A: Here:

-(void)viewDidLoad { [super viewDidLoad]; if (self.toolbar.customView) return; [self.toolbar.customView removeFromSuperview]; [self.view addSubview:self.toolbar]; }

When you dismiss a tab, the toolbar will be removed from the view, and added again. It's probably being "hidden" because the frame of the toolbar is the same as when it was first added. I suggest you use a subclass of UIViewController.

A: Is self.toolbar being added as a subview of the same view that is where you are seeing the toolbar? If so, that would be the reason why the toolbar doesn't appear when you change to another tab. If this is all you are adding the toolbar to, it won't be removed when you switch tabs. It is still a subview of

10 Things You Might Not Know About The Rangers

The Central Division is packed with young talent and goaltending is one of the biggest questions going into the new season. One of the teams with some question marks in net is the New York Rangers. Here are 10 things you might not know about the Rangers heading into their 5th season in the NHL.

- 1) The Rangers lead all teams in the league in wins last season with 103. This squad will lose a few key players, but they still have all of their core players who helped the team finish as a second-place finisher in the Eastern Conference.
- 2) The team is still led by the captain and top scorer from last season, Rick Nash, who is coming off of another successful campaign, and Marian Gaborik, who has missed most of the past two seasons due to injury.
- 3) The Rangers started the season with an AHL affiliate in the Hartford Wolf Pack. Henrik Lundqvist and Marc Staal were a part of that team last season.
- 4) Keith Yandle, another key addition to the team, was paired with Ryan McDonagh when he played with the Rangers. Yandle had 38 points last season with the Coyotes in limited time and is a big part of the Rangers team moving forward.
- 5) The team had one of the best coaches in the NHL last season with Alain Vigneault. He left to become head coach of the Vancouver Canucks. 6) Vigneault guided the Rangers to their best record in e79caf774b Decreased caspase-12 expression is associated with poor prognosis in advanced lung adenocarcinoma. Our previous study showed that caspase-12 expression was related to prognosis in patients with early-stage non-small cell lung cancer. In the present study, we evaluated the expression of caspase-12 in advanced lung adenocarcinoma and analyzed the correlations between caspase-12 expression and clinical factors and survival in advanced lung adenocarcinoma. Caspase-12 expression was examined in 138 patients with advanced lung adenocarcinoma by immunohistochemistry. The relationship between caspase-12 expression and clinicopathologic variables and survival was examined. Positive caspase-12 expression was observed in 44 of 138 (31.9%) cases of advanced lung adenocarcinoma. Statistical analyses indicated that caspase-12 expression correlated significantly with N stage ($P = 0.034$) and was associated with a trend toward an association with clinical stage ($P = 0.093$), but it was not associated with other clinicopathologic features, including age, tumor grade, and tumor size. Univariate analysis showed that the 5-year overall survival rate was significantly higher in patients with positive caspase-12 expression (66.0%) than in patients with negative caspase-12 expression (26.3%) (P

Computed tomography was performed on the first three hospital days in 101 patients with acute pancreatitis. Eighty-one of the patients had an acute attack of alcoholic pancreatitis. Typical CT findings were localized fat necrosis, and it was easy to distinguish this form from those with edematous pancreatitis. Fat necrosis was characterized by the accumulation of fat in the dependent portions of the gland, and the amount of fat in each of these regions correlated with the amount of the clinical and laboratory signs of the disease. Reversible edematous pancreatitis was associated with diffuse parenchymal enlargement and an increase in the serum amylase level. Edematous pancreatitis was associated with the absence of both fat necrosis and obstruction of the main pancreatic duct. Frequently, intraabdominal fluid was observed adjacent to the distal common bile duct or around the pancreas, depending on the size of the pancreas. The changes in the lumen of the bile ducts were variable and did not seem to parallel the CT findings. Computed tomography was useful for the rapid assessment of acute pancreat
