KUNI Scan Complete Collection (21866 pics)Who are all of these people? What makes them so special? Who cares? That's how I felt when I first heard about the Dallas Cowboys' and Jerry Jones' plans to erect a star on the side of a brand-new stadium, to be built in Dallas. Yes, I'm a Cowboys fan (and a Texan), but I'm also a fan of a dozen other teams, of other cities, and of most of the athletes who have played in them. Dallas/Fort Worth is a mecca for professional sports. Why would we want to distinguish our stadium with a giant star honoring one of the small number of teams that have won four Super Bowls in 18 years? And then the Cowboys sent me the plans. Oh. That. Yep, that. According to the Cowboys, the star won't be as big as it is in New York, Chicago, or Los Angeles, but it will be the biggest in the NFL. It will be 12 feet tall, and it will be mounted on the facade of the new stadium. I'm not making this up. "Jerry Jones called me a little while ago and said, 'After we were done with Super Bowl 50, we were driving back to the hotel in South Park and he was looking out the window of the van and he saw this street sign at this intersection where we were and he said, 'I think we should put a star on there, we've been to this country that has the most stars on buildings in the world. Why not put one on our building in Texas?' So we did." This is where the story takes a turn. You see, according to Jones, he doesn't think the star is going to be so big. He says it will actually be about half the size
