Adobe provides a basic tutorial to get you started with Photoshop, and, while there are some free trial downloads of Photoshop, the program is best purchased through Photoshop Guru. There is also a free guide to the Photoshop Essentials course that covers the basics and provides recommendations on upgrading to the full version. Here are some details on Photoshop's features that you'll want to know before using the software. Crop and Rotate Images You can crop an image by either dragging the crosshairs around the image, or you can crop by dragging and dropping the crop tool, or simply by clicking the crop tool. To rotate an image, use the rotate tool, or the letter x. Drag around a circle to rotate. As you drag, the crosshairs change to indicate the rotation. To remove a portion of an image, use the zoom tool, or the letter i. With the zoom tool, you can draw freehand lines to remove an area of an image or adjust the size of a portion of an image. To select an area of an image, use the selection tool. You can then cut, copy, or paste an area of an image by clicking on the desired area. With the layer tools, you can change the opacity of a layer and move an object across multiple layers. These tools are the best for when you're working with multiple layers, because they make it easy to layer multiple versions of the image to create different effects. To edit images, use the selection tool to select areas, then use the filter and adjustment tools to add special effects and make an image more vibrant. You can apply various filters to a layer to give the layer a special look. For example, you can apply a blurring effect to layers and leave an image more crisp. You can apply several filters to one layer, and you can create an artistic picture or change the colors using the adjustment tools. To apply an effect to an area of an image, use the selection tool to select the area, and use the filter and adjustment tools to apply an effect. Editing Multiple Layers When you're using multiple layers, it is essential to save time and keep your files organized. If you make a mistake in your first try, you can either delete the layer or change the selection. To do so, first save the file by pressing Ctrl+S on your keyboard. Then, press Ctrl+Z to undo

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to valve control devices and a method for assembling these devices. More specifically, the present invention relates to control devices for controlling the flow of fluid from a fluid source to a fluid destination, the control device including a plurality of fluid ports, each of which is adapted to be opened and closed by an actuation member. The invention is especially suitable for fluid control devices that are used in the medical industry, although the invention also is applicable to numerous other uses. 2. Description of the Related Art Many different types of valve control devices are well known in the medical industry, for use in controlling the flow of medical fluids. Many of these devices are assembled by hand or by mechanically-operated automatic assembly methods, such as robots. The following U.S. patents illustrate valve control devices known in the art: U.S. Pat. No. 4,906,996 (Ciliberto et al.) discloses a valve control device that includes a body defining a first cavity and a second cavity. The body defines a fluid inlet port, a fluid outlet port and a plurality of fluid flow paths connecting the first cavity to the second cavity. Each of the fluid flow paths includes a valve member slideably disposed in the valve body. A thrust surface on the valve member is positionable adjacent to a valve seat defined in the valve body between the second and first cavities to block fluid communication therebetween. A sleeve is disposed within the cavity defined by the valve body. The sleeve is positionable to provide fluid communication through the valve body. An actuation member is disposed on the sleeve and provides for axial movement of the sleeve with respect to the valve body to thus position the thrust surface of each of the valve members with respect to the Herpesvirus replication is inhibited by substance P in vivo. Substance P (SP) is an endogenous tachykinin that exerts diverse actions on target organs such as the gastrointestinal tract, airways, and central nervous system. In this study, we have investigated the effects of SP on viral replication in an animal model of infection. SP is able to regulate the progression of herpes simplex virus (HSV) infections in the mouse cornea. The intra-ocular (i.o.) injection of SP during HSV-1 infection reduces both the incidence and severity of infection, as measured by the corneal opacity/swelling, the number of infected cells, and the expression of immediate early (IE) and late (L) viral transcripts. SP down-regulates the HSV-1 immediate early kinetics of expression by 90% as shown by real-time quantitative polymerase chain reaction in neuronal cells and the trigeminal ganglia, and by 90% as measured by immunostaining in infected trigeminal ganglia. SP is able to inhibit both the autocrine and the paracrine release of factors that induce the production of prostaglandins and hypertrophy of the epithelial cells, and this might partly explain how SP influences viral growth in vivo. These findings suggest that SP exerts an antiviral effect on HSV infections in vivo, and its action may partly be mediated by changes in the levels of interleukin-1 and possibly of interleukin-6 in the cornea.Q: Permanently disable auto-reload in Google App Engine with Django I have an app that uses the google app engine framework. I'm using Django 1.4.6 and the function autoreload takes a parameter, which normally I would give an interval of 1, to turn off reloading. autoreload = autoreload.ContextManager() autoreload.run_once() autoreload.autoreload() However, when I changed my app to run on a t1.micro instance, the reloading of apps started to happen at a frequency that is way too fast. I checked the Cloud Console, and it reported that the tasks were being run every 3 seconds. I thought about removing the app from the Google App Engine and creating a new one with settings.py set to 1, but I have many users using my app and I'd rather not have them have to do
