AutoCAD's functions are divided into six layers: Editor (plotting and drawing) Browsing Sketching Modeling AutoCAD 2018 supports 2D and 3D drawing with raster and vector geometry. It also includes objects such as blocks, shaded and unshaded surfaces, custom colors, path objects, and linetypes. These are grouped into four categories: Geometry Numeric Text Picture 3D objects, including free-form solids, polylines, and polylines with text, are automatically created when a CAD file is opened. Some 2D blocks can be grouped into 3D solids. These objects are then used to create project models that can be viewed with a large monitor or on a mobile device. 3D objects can be created using the spline tool, the wireframe tool, the shape builder tool, the extrude tool, the roll tool, the polyline tool, or the 3D window. Users can select the fill color of a shape (solid color, gradation, or texture), the stroke color of a shape (solid color, gradient, or texture), the linetype of a shape (line style, dashed, dotted, or undotted), the line color of a path, or the text color. Shapes can be grouped, sorted, and manipulated using various tools. It is also possible to select and manipulate individual blocks within a group of blocks.
