The non-pyretic infants are not under-represented in the cases; the population of non-pyretic infants is known to be older than the population of infants that are presented with hypoxia [0115], [0140]. Few prior studies have examined the response of the immune system of preterm infants. One study showed that umbilical cord blood cytokine levels were different in EOS and LOS infants. While EOS infants had higher IFN- γ and TNF- α levels, LOS infants had higher IL-6 levels [0145]. In another study of preterm infants, IL-1 and IL-6 levels were elevated in the plasma of infants with sepsis compared to controls [0150]. Taken together with our current data, these prior studies suggest that preterm infants have dysregulated immune responses. In preterm infants, an increase in IL-6 is associated with a more severe course of the infection and with failure of early treatment [0155]. In the case where infection has been indicated and antibiotic treatment started, a limited number of studies have demonstrated that the pro- and anti-inflammatory cytokine balance is restored to pre-infection levels [0160]. The limited number of studies on preterm infants treated with antibiotics indicate that anti-inflammatory cytokine levels are higher than proinflammatory ones, but without any differences between LOS and EOS in the level of TNF- α . In the case of IL-6, one study has shown higher IL-6 levels after 48 h of treatment in the EOS group than in the LOS group,

The first fatal case was a 70-year-old Singaporean man who died at Sentul Hospital on Feb 24 and the latest was a 61-year-old Singaporean woman who died at the National Centre for Infectious Diseases on Saturday, said the Ministry of Health (MOH). Most of the new cases are linked to a cluster of infections in dormitory block 9, Block 551 and adjacent blocks of Permaisuri Specialist Hospital, where a Singaporean man, a Singaporean woman, four Malaysians and four Indonesians were confirmed to have the virus. But MOH said the three latest fatalities were not linked to the cluster. It added that another eight confirmed cases are linked to the cluster, and another six are under investigation. More than 300 people are being isolated at various quarantine facilities, while flight bookings to Singapore are being paused. The measures are aimed at managing the potential spread of the virus, which has also been identified in Iran, the UK, France and Germany, among others. MOH said Singapore's outbreak response system is in place to deal with infectious diseases, including the new coronavirus. It added that the risk of outbreaks in Singapore is low. But travellers from the affected areas and anyone who has close contact with the infected persons should continue to take all necessary precautionary measures. These include: Caring for symptoms of infection Treating suspected cases immediately Practising good personal hygiene Washing hands frequently with soap and water Avoiding contact with live animals, poultry, laboratory specimens and anyone showing symptoms of illness Anyone with a fever or flu-like symptoms should seek medical attention immediatelyQuantifying the Impact of the Transmission of Anticoagulants on Reductions in Transfusion Requirements.
