CTX-M and TEM-100 beta-lactamases in clinical and environmental isolates in Buenos Aires, Argentina. From January to December 2002 we evaluated a total of 1163 strains of Enterobacteriaceae and Pseudomonas aeruginosa isolated from clinical and environmental sources and harbouring beta-lactamase resistance determinants. The most common beta-lactamases observed were the enzymes CTX-M-1, CTX-M-9 and TEM-100. CTX-M-1, present in 62.9% of the clinical strains of Enterobacteriaceae, was also detected in high proportions in environmental strains of the same species. The highest levels of CTX-M-1 and TEM-100 detected in clinical isolates were of 100 and 68.6%, respectively. Q: I need more time to qualify; can I talk to my supervisor? I had an excellent interview with an interesting company. The company said they needed to move to another city and would be hiring for the position. I was very excited about the position, so I enrolled for the online course to be able to test for a few days before the interview (I didn't want to take the week off of work). Yesterday I got a call from their recruiter, saying that they were going to get the process moving, but they needed me to provide some documentation. I said, "oh, I will get it to them within the next 24 hours", but I did not. Today, about an hour before the interview, I was sent 6d1f23a050
