Virgin Islander Tends Her Garden Using Hand-Held Sharpener November 6, 2011 Michael Siegel hosts a show called Sturgis On A Budget and in that show he interviews very interesting people. One of the people he talked to is Dufis Abrigo who is a super smart guy. He was born in the Virgin Islands in 1935 and now lives in Orlando Florida. Dufis is a self taught gardener. He learned about gardening when he was a child in the Virgin Islands and that was over 60 years ago. He came to the United States in 1965 and his gardening skills and knowledge have not diminished one bit! Dufis has been fortunate enough to sell his gardening tips and his seeds online. When he was in the Virgin Islands he was very much into gardening and he tells an interesting story about going to the Taro Vines and Cane fields to pick a special fruit called Dragon Fruit that was used in a sauce called Guava Jelly. He said he used to pick the taro vine but he isn't sure if that is still done. He says the people of the Virgin Islands grow large taro vine and water them to keep them healthy and strong. Today he is well into his sixties and his interest in gardening is still strong and he shares some of the tricks of the trade with his viewers. Dufis tells a story about when he was young he was in the Virgin Islands and he had a plastic container that was full of broccoli. He went out to put some water in and what did he see? In the bottom of the container were the legs and wings of a rooster. In the container with the broccoli was not one but two roosters! The rooster are not native to the Virgin Islands but they were introduced by a person who brought them to the islands. He says they were very small and if left on their own they would become prey to cats and other animals. He says that it was his job to come and collect them for people and to eat them. He was very young at the time and being a kid he was able to put the roosters in a cage and sell them. The cage was attached to his bicycle and he took it to the people who 6d1f23a050
