external javascript file So I have multiple leaflet maps that have been linked to the html file I created through the following html code: For example, I have both a state map and an LDC map linked to the LDC.php file. I am trying to build a javascript function to allow a user to navigate from one of these maps to another map. For example, when they click on a particular state, it will send them to the LDC map, and vice versa. The problem I have is that the map functions can't seem to find their map. For example, I can get an image to display on the state map if I have an iframe for it. But, when I navigate to the LDC page I can't access the LDC and I get an error: Map.LDC is not defined. Is there any way I can get it to find the map that was included in the script I created? Or, am I completely going about this the wrong way? I am very new to javascript and mapping, so any input would be greatly appreciated. A: There is a problem in your code. You have two maps and the first one is named LDC. If you want to switch the maps you have to use the switchMap function of the L.Map object. Here an example: map.once("map:loaded", function(event) { map.switchMap(function() { console.log("map loaded!"); return L.map('LDC'); }); }); How does it work? The maps are loaded in the once() function. It should be called once but it can be called multiple times. Then the IL-22 is a cytokine that plays important roles in the pathogenesis of psoriasis and pruritic dermatitis. We generated two mouse lines with epidermal-specific expression of IL-22, the IL-22 transgenic (IL22TG) and the IL-22 transgenic overexpressing keratin 14 (K14) under the control of the keratin 14 promoter (K14-IL-22). Strain-dependent differences in the severity of the dermatitis were observed in both lines. K14-IL-22 mice showed a milder dermatitis than the IL22TG mice, which in contrast, had an exacerbated phenotype. Both lines developed an extensive and thickened epidermis with an increase of K5-positive basal cells. At the same time, epidermal expression of IL-1 α and IL-1 β was slightly reduced whereas IL-1 receptor antagonist (IL-1ra) expression was strongly increased. Finally, serum levels of IL-22 were considerably increased in K14-IL-22 mice. In conclusion, K14-IL-22 mice, independent of the mouse strain, developed a massive epidermal cell hyperproliferation in the midst of a down-regulation of IL-1 α and IL-1 β , accompanied by an induction of IL-1ra and systemic accumulation of IL-22. Thus, K14-IL-22 mice represent a unique and relatively easy-to-handle model, which allows for future investigations into the molecular mechanisms of IL-22-mediated skin inflammation.Q: New combination for exchange rate I am trying to understand the concept of exchange rate and conversion. I am starting by looking at the example provided here, but what I can't see is, how can you get the the conversion rate for £100 to €$1000 (going the other way round). I have tried doing it based on the link, but I don't see it. $$100 \times \frac{€}{£} = \frac{€}{£} \times 100 \times 1.26 \times 10 = £130.6$ Can someone
