davidjpeck@yahoo.com: Hello, I would like to ask you a question and I hope you answer it. What do you think of MacOS X and Windows 8? Are you both systems good or bad? If you say that MacOS X is a good system, then this will mean that you are not using it correctly. I think you should think of MacOS X as good Windows installed on a Mac, and we would recommend that anyone who really wants to use this system go to a Mac.

Free Download Angry Birds Game.Q: using curly braces in asp.net url I have a dynamically created file list on an asp.net page. I send the file list as a JSON string to the server and on the server i want to send an array back to the client containing the properties of each file in the list. The problem is that the property name of the JSON array is automatically generated so it will actually be an object like this in the JSON: {"Company":"Company A","Product":"Product A","Img":""} This is fine but the url shown on the javascript part of the page will contain the URL to the image like this: " i want it to be: " how can i do this? A: Use { } to wrap the string instead. " becomes " (-1)^N\left(\begin{array}{cc} \backslash_2&\backslash_r_2 \\ \backslash_1&\backslash_r_1 \end{array}\right) c6a93da74d
