The new Automatic Playback check box function allows the BS.Player to identify and download the information for the Automatic Playback setting for all movies. The Automatic Playback type will then be in the Uploaded Movies list. This will also happen when selecting a particular genre in the new Movie Genre column on the My Movies list. If there is no Automatic Playback type in the Uploaded Movies list, the Automatic Playback is not available in the Video Pane. If you do not select this option, BS.Player can not detect the automatic playback type for movies and will not work for it. NOTE: If you downloaded the trial version of BS.Player, then you will not be able to use the Codec Manager. If you want to use the Codec Manager, then first install the free version of BS.Player, then install the Codec Manager. Finally, our team has included some minor improvements. For example, now you can use all the media files with H.264 codec inside the DOCS folder. "Play all" button will also appear in the player window and it will play all those videos using the H.264 codec automatically. You can also re-encode the video files using the H.264 codec now! To do this simply choose "Re-encode" from the menu. This will re-encode the video. The new H.264 codecs are automatically downloaded during re-encoding. If you want to re-encode the file using different settings (like different audio bitrate, audio channels, etc) than you can choose the new "Re-encode using custom settings" option. Downloading and installing BS.Player PRO does not take long. Just follow the instructions and you are set for good. You can find and follow the above mentioned Beta versions on the following page:
