The game offers the most realistic combat experience to date and there is a huge array of equipment to be chosen from ranging from boots to heads. Whereas an over-glorified action-adventure game like The Matrix can be easily tamed by the insertion of a few simple hack-and-slash moves, a complex simulation of WW2 combat can be expected to require hours of fiddling about. In the interest of fairness, the rules of Generals are so well balanced that the 1, 2, 4 or 6 player modes are all equivalent. The following are the scenario files for Generals Zero Hour, the first three represent the First Decade of the C&C Generals series, and the final three the C&C Generals : Zero Hour campaign Campaigns are campaigns using original scenarios of from the C&C Generals series. The campaign is split into four sections and are set in chronological order. They are: The Generals Zero Hour Campaign Generator. 1. World War 2 in Europe, including C&C Generals 1. 2. Terror of the north, including C&C Generals 2. 3. America Rising, including C&C Generals 3. 4. The Future, including C&C Generals 4 This Challenge mode contains twenty scenarios and is a in-game version of the Ready For War Challenge mode. The Generals Challenge mode requires three weapons, two armour pieces, a piece of support gear, and the order of the General Commanders per scenario. Each commander has a set skill level, with the higher skill level on a commander granting a bonus to both his armour and weapon skill. There are three levels of training for the commanders, as well as a training room in which they can all train at once.
