Today, we've published the first Windows 10 Creators Update (RS4) to Windows Insiders in the Fast ring in the form of an ISO to your Windows 10 Insider Preview (RS4) installation. You can find the ISO under the Fast ring's ISO page. This tool provides native Windows Store Applications, and iOS and Android mobile applications. It also enables you to run older version Windows applications including COM components, using a virtual desktop. GHC is a free and open-source alternative to the proprietary compiler software GHC. It supports GHCi, the GHC command-line interface, which works with virtual machines, interpreters, and real compilers. It supports GHC version 6.12.3 and higher. GHC is an alternative to the official GHC. While GHC is only limited to CPython, Python 3.8 and 3.7 is compatible with GHC. There are many advantages of using GHC over HOTPLUG . GHC provides a large number of Haskell libraries that are not available in CPython. GHC allows users to get easy access to the vast Haskell library and to view its source code. TotallyFreeBrowser is a cross-platform, open-source browser for Windows XP, Vista, 7, 8 and Windows 10 that brings you a well-executed, fast and straightforward browsing experience. It's the best free web browser. TotallyFreeBrowser (http://totalfb.net) has a simple interface, very fast load times and it has a clean code. Update on the above message, this build will install anything you want... But mind you, this build will take 30 mins to over night since its Windows 10 Insider Preview (soon Windows 10 >100%). I guess if you set your home internet to download very fast, you might live-update your PC in less than an hour. This is still Insider Preview Build, so do be careful about what you install/remove/upgrade etc...!

In case when user kill Windows Media Player while it is rendering AVI format, it won't work correct until you restart Windows. Of course, it could happen in any other software, because media format is really sensitive to such change of a software. Don't worry, backup yourself before any changes! Or in other words, make a backup before updating. Updates are almost always buggy, and sometimes can make your system unusable! But why I'm saying that? Because windows 8.1 (unfortunately) removed the right-click menu to uninstall apps by default, forcing people to use the Control Panel. This can be bypassed by running the uninstall program with administrator privileges and configuring the app/program to run under the LocalSystem account. So, knowing that, here's an answer to your question: why the right-click button isn't working on Windows 8.1/10? It's also possible to force the uninstall of an app which is already installed. Windows 8.1 runs the uninstall as a pre-action to the program's normal install/uninstall sequence. This means that on uninstall, any custom actions defined for the app are executed first, and then the application itself. Windows 10 runs the uninstall with the installation after the app's uninstall, so any custom actions should be executed after the application. This means that you can force the uninstall of an application using the following method: Announcing a new Windows Image Infrastructure SDK! We've enhanced the ability to customize Windows 10 builds with the Windows Image Infrastructure (WII) SDK. The new SDK includes improved support for Windows 10, Windows Server, and existing Windows Server image formats. We've also added support for Windows Server Core images, and you can now configure the location for logs in Tasks Scheduler. 5ec8ef588b
