
L.A. Noire 1.3.2617 Update - RELOADED

the new patch, while available for pc players now, only supports psvr for now. psvr owners should update to the latest version of the psvr software and restart their ps4 system to get access to the updates. the same red star system from grand theft auto v will be used, allowing players to import and export a game to and from their consoles. it is also possible to save a game online. the game has been updated to allow for high definition resolutions, and the game will now use the built-in hardware of the xbox one and ps4. and the most important detail of all: the interrogation. in l.a. noire, suspects are not simply witnesses to a crime, they are criminals, and their role in the crime is key to solving it. in a strange city, and in an interrogation where suspects have no rights, the detective must beat the truth out of the criminal by letting the law intrude on the suspect's life. the detective has no right to ask questions, but the suspect must answer. and it is here where the ps3 holds up to the 360 and xbox one. if you cannot see a suspect, they are not under arrest. they are free to leave. if you cannot see them, they cannot be captured. a suspect can run away. or they can look at you. if they look at you, they cannot leave. and if you ask them a question, they can answer. and if they can answer, you can ask them another. until they either confess, or you conclude that they are guilty. and they are. ultimately, l.a. noire is a game about how we construct a criminal. and that means there is no single answer. in the game, most of the crimes you investigate have no real motive. they are random, and they are poorly thought out, and with no real connection to each other. and in the game, it is up to the detective to figure out the exact reason behind every incident. you can interrogate a witness, and you can search the environment for a clue, but the most important thing is your intuition. if the perpetrator had a reason to kill the victim, why did they kill the victim? these are the things that bring the detective to the truth. what was the motive for the murder? what was the motive for the victim's death? how was the crime committed? how was the crime prevented? the answers to these questions can sometimes be connected. sometimes the suspect confesses. sometimes the suspect is exonerated. sometimes the suspect is innocent, and the case is dropped. but either way, it can be an intriguing process. and that is what makes l. noire such a triumph.

a great side effect
of playing l.a.
noire, was the
feeling of walking
in the shoes of a

real detective.
when i was able to spend time with
real detectives like
frank mcree and
russell hicks, i felt like i was getting a
real experience. i
was able to experience some of the pressure and difficulty of the job. this was a fun surprise and something i had never experienced before, even in a tutorial. but the

reason l.a. noire
works so well is
because the
player is given
control of a
detective instead
of a policeman.
thats what makes
the game so

compelling. its not about following a
script or just
watching a cop
work through an investigation. its
about the
detective or
policeman doing

their job, looking
for clues,
interviewing
witnesses and
suspects, and then
trying to piece
together what happened. its up
to the player to

connect the dots,
to make sense of
everything that
the detective or
policeman
discovers. its rewarding, but
theres no
guarantee of

success. its
investigation and
puzzle solving at its best. in the first
week of la noire,
the developer
released a series
of videos showing
the process of

investigation. the
videos are
interesting to
watch, but thats
only the first week
of the game.
theres not really
enough to do in rockstars first

episode and its
mostly an extended look at
how the
interrogation
works. there arent
a lot of places to
go or things to do

in l.a. noire. but
the game isnt
about walking
around a city for
very long either,
its about spending
hours finding
clues, talking to

piecing together a story. theres a lot of detail to figure out in every level, whether it be a small piece of evidence in an interrogation room, or the

location of a body
in an empty
warehouse. there
are no auto-
complete
functions or
inventory lists for investigation
materials like

there are in most
games. the player
has to look for every piece of
evidence,
regardless of
where it is found.
