Supp. 2d 1183 (CIT 2003) was a United States Court of International Trade case that dealt with import duty administration on clothing and apparel. History In a ruling in favor of the petitioners, the U.S. Court of International Trade found that Customs had misclassified certain items as textile structures, as opposed to apparel, for purposes of classification. The court concluded that clothing made from textile structures should be classified under Harmonized Tariff Schedule note 801.90.95 (U.S.), and that the merchandise could not be classified under Note 801.00.44 (U.S.) to apparel.
