Evaluation of the collected data is a critical task when it comes to application statistics. Especially in small and medium businesses, whose accounts can be managed by various users, it is important to give clear and concise information about the state of the companies. The solution to this problem can be found in the Keymacro database, which has been developed in close cooperation with consultants from various industries. Currently, it provides statistical evaluation, analysis, and comparative analysis of company data, thanks to a comprehensive set of over 100 metrics, indicators, and analysis elements. One of these elements is an application evaluation system, which is built into the program, so that users can evaluate application objects and write their own reports with the data they collect. As we were not able to test the evaluation system for Keymacro directly, we contacted the developer, who said that they were planning to add an export option to the evaluation system, and provide an archive with information about the companies evaluated, once the report has been completed.
