KEYMACRO is a program that allows people to make macros for Windows. It is a similar program to AutoHotkey, which is a hotkey recorder and recorder. The difference between the two is that AutoHotkey records keyboard shortcuts and converts them to C++ code. It is a more powerful application, allowing users to record more than one action and call it back any time they want, as well as creating macros and then running them in the background. On the other hand, KEYMACRO allows users to record only one action. If this is not enough for you, you are required to enter C++ code yourself. There are a number of pre-made macros, such as Open URL, Set Background Color, Set Text Color, Open File, Close File, Clear Clipboard, Edit File and Run Command. However, it is not possible to make your own. Users are required to edit a file, known as hotkey.cfg, in order to make use of the pre-made macros. Each line is formed of four fields, namely "Name, Description, Code and Key". The code will be executed in a certain way when the macro is called, while the name is a descriptive name for it. This will appear in the context menu when clicking on the entry. The description can be used to explain the function of the macro, thus letting you select it in the context menu. KEYMACRO Usage If you have a document that you are constantly editing, chances are that you have a hard time remembering how to get there. With the help of KEYMACRO, you will not need to remember all the buttons and functions on your computer. For example, if you need to open a specific file, you simply select it from the context menu and then press the corresponding key, which will open that file. If you need to clear the clipboard, you can select the corresponding option in the context menu and simply press the key to do so. You can also set the colors for the windows, edit text, open a URL in the browser and run a command in the command line.
