A novel human developmental disease results from a single base pair mutation in the gene encoding the microtubule associated protein, tau. The mutant protein is highly insoluble and accumulates in the brain as tangles of neurofibrillary tangles. In Alzheimer's disease, tau tangles form neurofibrillary tangles, a hallmark lesion. We have recently discovered that tau is highly expressed during neuronal development. Postnatally, tau protein is eliminated from neurons. Tau dysfunction may result in the neuronal death, loss of function, and cognitive dysfunction observed in Alzheimer's disease. We are currently developing methods to characterize the molecular mechanism of tau degradation. Most work has focused on identifying tau-binding proteins that may serve as tau chaperones. We have identified several proteins that are both specific and biologically significant to tau degradation. We plan to characterize one of these proteins in detail.Q: Angular ng-model is resetting to first value in ng-repeated table on click I'm writing a web app where my table displays records. I have a select field in my table which selects all rows in a table. On the first selection of rows, it's working fine. When I select one row and then change to another row, the selected field's value is set back to the first value. I'm not very
