The use of carrier ampholytes has been shown to provide significant advantages for the resolution and interpretation of complex mixtures in anionic species in electrophoresis. However, over the past decade it has become clear that some proteins have been shown to be sensitive to the presence of carrier ampholytes. Our study determined, for the first time, the activity of charged gel matrix as an alternative to carrier ampholytes for protein separation. We evaluated the separation of 11 proteins and determined the suitable separation conditions. It was found that denaturing sodium dodecyl sulfate polyacrylamide gel (SDS-PAGE) provided better protein separation, in terms of both resolution and percentage of active bands, compared to zwitterionic gel.
