Packard Bell. duhulu malak sinhala movie download On November 22, 2003, the city of Houston awarded the new $22.2 million Frye Museum. The site was an old chicken farm before the last of the chickens were picked and the last layer was plucked. It took 39 years to build this museum and it took two months to prepare it for opening day. The 9'x9'x10' Frye Museum is big enough to house a small airplane and the oversized installation are the Boeing 727 airplane that was once flown by Braniff Airways. The airplane was purchased from Old Executive Aircraft when it ceased to be operated by Braniff, the original owner of the aircraft being Braniff Airlines. The museum is not only a Boeing 727 it is also one of the first museums that can trace the history of transportation in America. The airplane has been restored to the same condition in which it was flown by Braniff. The plane is painted with a Braniff Airways logo. The airplane was flown by Canadian-born pilot Paul Wingert who arrived in Houston in 1957, he was a successful pilot by the year 1960. Soon he joined Braniff and in the fall of 1962, Wingert was the co-pilot of the first commercial jet flight. This flight was sponsored by Braniff and lead to a routining change for national air carriers. Braniff was a flag-carrier for the United States. With Braniff Airways, Wingert became nationally known in the United States as a pilot and ambassador of the airline. On January 28, 1964, Wingert flew the plane from Houston to Dallas without passengers and landed at his first destination at Dallas Love Field. Braniff was sold to Texas Air in 1966, and the airline became a city of Houston airline. Also, National Airlines was purchased by Texas Air and operation of the carrier moved to Houston and it was now known as Texas International Airlines. Wingert retired from Braniff in 1978, when TIA was sold to Texas Air. In 1982, the Boeing 727 was sold to Old Executive Aircraft, a company that specializes in the modification and upgrading of aircraft. Old Executive Aircraft modified the 727 to look like a Boeing 727, but with an extra cabin. Located in Humble, Texas, the museum is open to the public every week. The museum is located at 9195
